

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 17.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 8.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people, and the need to ensure that they are able to live independently and actively in their own homes. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of the National Health Service (NHS) Homecare Programme, the establishment of the Older People's Foundation, and the development of the Older People's Survey (OPS). The OPS is a national survey of older people's needs and experiences, and is the largest survey of its kind in the world.

The OPS is a cross-sectional survey of older people's needs and experiences, and is conducted every five years. The first OPS was conducted in 1990, and the most recent was conducted in 2000.
